Generator safety worries Highlands East

GREG HOEKSTRA

Staff Reporter

Highlands East is urging residents to stop using any generators sold by the Highland Grove Firefighters Association until safety approval markings on the devices can be verified.

On July 10, the municipality issued a "stop use notice" and announced that they are investigating the legitimacy of Canadian Standards Association (CSA) approval stickers on various models of generators that were sold throughout 2006 and 2007.

To date, there have been no reports of injury or property damage involving the generators, but the municipality is taking no chances, since non-approved generators may pose a potential shock or fire hazard.

The generators in question were sold by the Ward 2 fire department as part of a fundraising drive last summer. Many of the units were sold in a frenzy after tornadoes tore through the area last August, and early estimates indicate more than 50 units may have been sold throughout the municipality.

This coming Saturday, July 28, the municipality plans to hold an open house at the Bicroft Fire Hall on Monk Road in Cardiff.

Romance at dusk

Toronto dancers Mairéad Filgate and Eddie Kastrau wowed audiences in Haliburton's Head Lake park last week during the second annual production of Dusk Dances. The pair played two star-crossed lovers in a scene inspired by the paintings of Marc Chagall. Dusk Dances ran nightly from Thursday to Sunday evening, taking those in attendance on a whimsical journey through the park to five "secret" locations. For more photos from the event please see pages 22 and 23.

Dead carp likely won't wash ashore in county

MATT JAMES

Staff Reporter

Following reports of thousands of dead carp in Scugog Township and the City of Kawartha Lakes, the problem seems to be heading north. Last week the Township of Galway-Cavendish & Harvey reported that dead carp have washed up on the shores of some of its lakes.

Is the Highlands at risk?

David Flowers, a fisheries extension biologist with the Ministry of Natural Resources in Minden and Bancroft, doesn't think so.

The only affected area in the Highlands to date is the Burnt River from Kinmount down to Cameron Lake. And after travelling approximately 13km of the Burnt River with other MNR staff, Flowers counted approximately 50 dead carp.

"It would appear that some of this mortality could be attributed to when the fish were spawning back in June. The really warm water temperatures may have contributed to some of the mortality that we saw over the past month," he says.

Some lakes and rivers reached temperatures as high as 80 degrees in June, which is also the peak of spawning season for carp.

A press release from the Township of Galway-Cavendish & Harvey said that bacteria known as flavobacterium columnare were found in some fish samples which were sent to the University of Guelph. But MNR biologist Dan Taillon said that scientists believe the bacteria will not affect humans.

June heat blamed for death of Kawarthas carp

However, the deceased fish were very old and decomposed, and in order for the MNR to do any proper testing, the fish must be freshly dead, within 24 hours. Flowers says that if no more fish die or the fish no longer seem to be struggling, that's telling them that whatever happened in the Burnt River is over and that things should be back to normal as soon as those fish are out of the system.

"At any time, with any fish that are spawning, you usually do see some mortality, but the pattern of mortality we saw with the carp was extremely unusual and in large numbers," said Flowers. "It's when you get them concentrated in a small area in large numbers that the opportunity for disease can express itself. And there is probably little chance [of that happening] up in our area. We don't have a lot of carp in the Minden or Bancroft area."

Flowers says there is no need for the public to panic if they see random dead fish. The MNR is, however, asking the public to call the hotline, 1-800-667-1940, if any unusual mortality is spotted.

Thousands of pounds of dead carp have washed ashore in the City of Kawartha Lakes.

Marriage of two family traditions celebrates 50th anniversary

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

When Bill Emmerson and Lois Bailey married in 1953, they did much more than bring two families together. They brought together two family business traditions and then created their own.

Bill had grown up in Donald, where his father ran the general store and started to develop lakefront properties on Koshlong Lake. Lois had grown up in Haliburton, where her father W.O. Bailey ran a mill and lumber operation.

Bill, meet Lois. Retail, meet lumber. Four years later, Emmerson Lumber was born.

In 1957, Bill Emmerson formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, Lloyd Bailey. They took a small corner of the W.O. Bailey & Sons lumber yard at the corner of Maple Avenue and Victoria Street and created Emmerson Lumber Company. The new business catered to the growing construction industry in Haliburton (an industry Bill would later foster as a property developer.)

On opening day, 1957, Lois Emmerson came to the new store with her baby son, Kim, in her arms.

Fifty years later, it was with awe and a little bit of astonishment that Lois helped Kim celebrate the 50th anniversary of Emmerson Lumber.

"The thought that it's 50 years seems unreal," she says. "It doesn't seem like 10."

Lois feels lucky that Kim wanted to take over the business following Bill's death in 1986, just as Kim was more than pleased to welcome his son, Ryan, to the business earlier this year.

Lois says that Bill Emmerson was a natural businessman. He had an instinctive sense of what people wanted and worked really hard to provide it.

In turn, Bill taught his son Kim the importance of paying attention to detail. Being thorough will help you be successful.

MARTHA PERKINS/Echo

Three generations of Emmersons celebrated the family business's 50th anniversary on Saturday: Ryan, Lois and Kim. The 1957 Chevy truck was restored as a way of commemorating Emmerson Lumber's long history in Haliburton. In the background is Lois's brother Cec Bailey. Their father, W.O., owned the mill at the site.

Kim has also helped the business grow by being keenly aware of new technologies and products. Today, Emmerson Lumber doesn't just supply the construction and renovation industry. Its design department can help people create the house or cottage that's perfectly suited to their needs and tastes.

Ryan is carrying on the family tradition by acquainting himself with every aspect of the business. A business management economics graduate of the University of Guelph, the 24-year-old is working his way through the various departments in the business. Just as his father knows something about everything at Emmerson Lumber, Ryan is learning everything there is to know about running the business in modern times.

"For our business we're ahead of our times," Ryan says. "We hire good employees and are knowledgeable about what's new. We accommodate customers who have ideas that are up and coming. I feel pretty honoured to be part of it."

Kim and the staff put a lot of work into planning a 50th birthday party for a business that has, quite literally, always been a part of Kim's life. There was a line-up down Maple Avenue at 7 in the morning as people waited for the 7:30 start of a gigantic sale of items all priced with the 50s in mind. Canoe FM broadcast live from the site, people arrived for a barbecue (with donations for the 500 hamburgers going to the health services foundation), 300 prizes to give away and Kim and Ryan showed off the bright shiny red Chevy pick-up truck that they've painstakingly restored.

Sitting under a tent selling tickets for the Rotary car draw, Lois Emmerson couldn't help but think what her husband would make of it all.

"I hope that Bill's looking down and saying, 'Great, keep it going.'"

One of the strengths of Emmerson Lumber is its dedicated and knowledgeable staff. At seven in the morning on Saturday, the entire staff gathered to mark the start of a sixth decade of helping residents and cottagers build their dreams in the Highlands.

Books fly off shelves – like magic

GREG HOEKSTRA

Staff Reporter

Harry Potter fans across the globe were in a frenzy last Saturday to get their hands on a copy of the seventh and final installment of the series – Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows – and Haliburton County was no exception.

Shel Whitteker, owner of Haliburton's Undercover Books, sold all of the 108 copies of the novel he had received from the book's publisher. What's more, every single copy had been reserved, some of them months in advance, meaning Whitteker was unable to sell copies to customers who wandered in off the street.

At Master's Book Store, 77 books have been sold, with the only ones left being those on order.

On Saturday afternoon Jenna Sutcliffe made a trip into Haliburton to pick up her copy of the book from Whitteker's store. Sutcliffe, a counsellor at Camp Towhee, ordered her copy back in early June and has been eagerly anticipating its release ever since.

"Actually, I've really been waiting a couple of years for this book," she says. "I've been waiting to see how it all ends."

Sutcliffe has read the entire series and her plan is to finish off the final book during her four-day break this week.

"I need to read it before the next group of kids arrives. That's my goal."

Just as Sutcliffe left the store – presumably to start reading – in walked Boshkung Lake cottager Aileen Black. Unlike Sutcliffe, Black called in to order the book only a few days beforehand, and she was lucky to get a copy.

Though Black is a big fan of the movies, she admits that she has actually read only one of the books in the Harry Potter series to date (the first one). This week,

GREG HOEKSTRA/Echo

Aileen Black got hooked on Harry Potter through the movies. But she was so eager to find out how the series ends that she ordered a copy of Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows from Shel Whitteker at Undercover Books.

Black says she plans to see the latest movie – Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix – before cracking open her copy of the final book to see how things end.

"I want to see what happens right away," she says.

Sylvie Kalenda, a writing student at Fleming College's Haliburton campus, was also in the book store on Saturday afternoon but says she is "waiting for the hype to die down" before she picks up her copy of the novel.

"Of course, I'll probably have to cover my ears for the next few weeks to avoid hearing how it ends," she laughs.

Like most Potter fans, Kalenda says she feels some attachment to the main character after reading several of the novels and seeing all of the movies. "I've followed Harry since he was eight years old at Hogwarts [School of Witchcraft]."

As a bookstore owner, Whitteker says the hype over the Harry Potter series is unparalleled by any other book release he has ever seen.

"The only thing that ever came close was the Da Vinci Code," he says.

Harry Potter charms readers

As a small business owner, Whitteker says it has been hard competing with major retailers – such as Chapters – both in quantity and price, but he notes that he is fortunate to have “loyal customers” who continue to support his business.

“You’d think that publishers would look out for the little guys, but they don’t really,” he says. “Right now Chapters is selling this book for only one dollar more than I paid for mine, and that’s because they buy millions at a time, while I can only really buy 100 or so.”

Across the world copies of Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows have been flying off shelves. After going on sale to the public at 12:01 a.m. on Saturday, the book sold a record-setting 8.3 million copies in the United States in its first day.

Meanwhile, Canadian book retailer Indigo Books has reported that the book was the fastest and best-selling novel in company history. Officials from Indigo have announced that the chain sold three books per second when it released the book on Saturday morning.

While the two local book stores have already sold their first batch of The Deathly Hallows, a second shipment will be arriving this week, meaning more Potter fans in the Highlands can have their crack at seeing how the saga comes to an end.

MATT JAMES/Echo

Even though there is a “for sale” sign on the Champlain Shores property, the owners are still going ahead with the approval process to build a residential complex on the former Deer Lodge property.

Kashagawigamog development still in the works

GREG HOEKSTRA

Staff Reporter

The fate of the Champlain Shores development on Wigamog Road is still up in the air, despite rampant rumours that the project has been abandoned by its developers.

During the June 23 annual general meeting of the Lake Kashagawigamog Organization (LKO), both Dysart Deputy-reeve Bill Davis and LKO Vice President John Matthews indicated to members that the development appeared to not be moving forward.

“There’s a ‘for sale’ sign on the property and when we visited it the other day everything seemed to be closed up,” said Matthews during the meeting.

However, in an interview with the Echo, Dysart’s municipal planner Patricia Martin said that, from the municipality’s standpoint, the developers still appear to be pushing forward with their proposal.

“I’m hearing the same rumours that they aren’t going forward, but on the other hand their planning is very active right now,” she said. “So if they are intending to sell, then they are planning to sell to another developer.”

In the late 1990s the municipality went through the zoning bylaw stages with the Champlain Shores developers, and that zoning bylaw is now in effect, with holding conditions that require them to meet various criteria, such as the completion of a hydro-geological study and a storm water management plan.

Currently, Martin says the developers are in the midst of gaining approval for the property’s water system, which “indicates to me that if they are not going to go forward with the development themselves then they are still looking to sell it with all the approvals in place.”

Since approvals are granted not to people, but to property, any approvals on the proposed site would still apply if a new developer decides to purchase the subject property for a similar project.

Several attempts were made to contact representatives from Champlain Shores but no calls were returned.

The waiting game

SOMETIMES IT'S HARD to put the news in newspapers. But it's not for lack of trying. For instance, every once in a while we'll phone the OPP in Minden to see if there's an update on Cynthia Horvath. She was the 44-year-old woman from the Gooderham area whose body was found along the wooded shores of the Drag River, 42 days after she was last seen by her family. That was on April 17.

The police wouldn't announce the cause of death until the post-mortem report was in. The police said it would take "a while" but three months? Given how long it's taken to get the results of the post-mortem, it seems logical to conclude that foul play isn't suspected. But it would be nice for the community to know that.

Likewise, last December the Ministry of Natural Resources said to expect a decision on the Bark Lake asphalt plant application "early in the new year." That was supposed to be early 2007, not 2008. There have been management staff changes at the MNR but still, that's a long time to keep everyone on tenterhooks.

Maybe, however, for those who oppose a permanent asphalt plant in the middle of scenic cottage country, that's a good sign. Maybe it means the MNR wants to make sure everyone has their say about the application. Maybe it means they're doing studies to find out whether the natural and social environment is going to adversely affected by such an industrial use of Crown land.

It may be frustrating but, you know what? Sometimes no news is good news. What we all consider to be news usually means that some family's life, or some neighbourhood's peace and quiet, has been ruined. Knock on wood but we've all been fairly lucky this summer. There have been few deaths, few major accidents or fires. It might not make for the most exciting front pages but if that's the price we have to pay for knowing that everyone is safe and fine, so be it.

Where it's happening

Every week in Cottage Times we run a list of events. The list is supposed to be for that week only. This week the list ran to 1,400 words which, if you've ever tried to lay out so many words, takes a heck of a lot of space.

This events list is yet another reminder of what a rich and vibrant place this is to live, cottage and visit. There are so many things going on that the newspaper has trouble fitting in the entire list. Of particular strength is the arts.

There may be such a thing as a lazy summer day in the Highlands but there's no such thing as a boring one.

Tilting at windmills

I TOOK A TRIP to London (where the Queen doesn't live) and decided to go there via Highway 89, which traverses westward (and eastward) across some of Ontario's prettiest rolling farmland.

After about an hour, somewhere near Mount Forest, I noticed windmills towering out of the countryside.

Not the old water pumping windmills but the big, power-generating type. I couldn't count them, but I think there must have been over a hundred of these huge fans slowly turning in the breeze, producing power for the area.

And, while they were definitely noticeable, they weren't awful. They were, I must admit, intriguing. Almost stately. And when you consider how precious production of energy has become, these giants, working off nothing but the breezes that flow over the farmland, become a thing of beauty. No kidding.

It brings to mind an article I read some time ago that dealt with these windmills as producers of power in U.S.A.. They figured that if they could fill any one of the states with these windmills, they could produce more than enough power to run the whole country. Of course, this plan stalled when it came to picking a state to sacrifice to windmills.

It got me thinking about our fair land, which has one-tenth of the population of our southern neighbours and about three times the land. I think we could take the state of, say, Kentucky and plunk it into Ontario and not even notice it.

You could put Texas into the Northwest Territories and have room for most of Europe. The point is that we could put a state's worth of windmills into some parts of this huge country of ours, and nobody would even notice them.

Up in the north, where the winds howl almost without pause, it could be powering the whole country, free.

Yes, I can hear the naysayers now. In Ontario, they will "study" the idea for the next 100 years and never have to really do anything. The rest of the country will want Ontario to pay for it because, well, because Ontario pays for everything.

Yes, of course it will cost billions. But what doesn't? We've been spending billions on nuclear plants and we all know how wonderful they are when they're working. When they're not working, which seems to be often, they're not only useless and expensive, they're very scary.

If something goes wrong with a windmill, it just stops and waits to be fixed.

And what about all the people that Ontario Hydro employs? Well, we could put several of them to work as windmill watchers.

"How are the windmills in your section, today, George? Are they all working?"

"Yes. All 100,000 of them are turning."

"In the same direction?"

"Yes, clockwise."

"Good, talk to you tomorrow, George."

Build them. Maintain them. And Bob's your uncle.

I know I'm going to be sorry for the following, but will someone tell me What's wrong with this plan?

Nothing to do

JUST THIS MORNING, my kids hit me with that most horrible of all summer sentences. "We have nothing to do," they said.

"Why not stack wood in the shed?" I suggested. "Or maybe mow the front lawn?"

If you've never witnessed the phenomenon known as sudden invisibility try responding to that statement with either of those replies - one moment they are standing there, the next they are nowhere to be seen. It's actually sort of spooky.

This is a little trick I learned from my own father thirty-plus years ago and it still works as well now as it did back then. And though it's a technique that every parent should know, I have come to realize that many do not use it nearly as often as they should.

Tales from

Vinegar Hill

It's true. There are poor fools who actually try to provide constructive suggestions such as "Why not play outside?" or "How about taking a set of binoculars, a field guide, and going bird watching?"

Advice like this can only lead to more complex trouble. Even if they like the suggestion, it just prompts more questions such as, "Good idea, what should we do out there?" or "Where are the binoculars?"

Inevitably, this devolves into a free and unsupervised flow of questions and answers which leads to completely predictable events such as the children digging a tunnel intended to run from your front yard to Beijing.

Or at least that has been my experience. Don't ask how this happens. It just does. It's one of nature's immutable laws. One moment you are talking about warblers and the next you've disclosed the location of the nearest pick and shovel to kids hopped up on boredom and chocolate. The up side is that this provides you with about twenty minutes of complete peace and quiet - and, if you're lucky, a new well. The down side is that twenty minutes is barely adequate time to hide.

Here's where the invisibility phenomenon gets a little unreliable too. Usually, my wife discovers the tunnel and then storms into my office. I think we could all agree that this might be a perfect time for invisibility to kick in. Without fail, however, it lets me down.

Following that, my wife convinces me that it would be a wise idea to supervise the filling in of that tunnel, often while I stand in it. And, after I've finished doing that, my kids present me with the same statement we started with: "We have nothing to do." That's when I'll ask them to dig me out.

I'm sure I'm not the only parent to go through this. But it seems to me that never in the history of childhood have kids had so much to do. So, once again I'll suggest a few activities, perhaps watching a movie, playing baseball, shooting their bows and arrows, creating small thermo-nuclear devices, or even playing a good old-fashioned board game in their tent.

Once again, they end up liking these ideas, which, as I said, only leads to further disruption and eventually right back to digging a tunnel to the Orient.

Or, at least that has been my experience. Don't ask how this happens. It just does. It's one of nature's immutable laws. One moment you are talking about Monopoly in a tent and the next you've disclosed the new location of the pick and shovel to kids hopped up on boredom and chocolate. The up side is that this provides you with about twenty minutes of complete peace and quiet - and, if you're lucky, another well.

The down side is your wife will stumble onto it once again. By the end of this, you've wasted more than half a day filling in tunnels, and the kids are no nearer to doing anything.

Still, when your wife comes out for the inspection, you're feeling kind of smug about having managed forty minutes of peace and quiet. So when she asks you what you're doing now, you casually remark, "Nothing. I have nothing to do right now?"

"Why not stack wood in the shed?" she suggests. "Or maybe mow the front lawn?"

Suddenly, much to her surprise and yours, the phenomenon of sudden invisibility finally kicks in...

pic of the past

The year was 1963 and Emmerson Lumber had just opened up its new and bigger showroom. The CKLY radio station from Lindsay was on hand to promote the event. Shown here is a class of local school children who had an opportunity to go "live" on air. Perhaps you may recognize some of the young faces!

letters to the editor

MNR responds to asphalt plant letter

To the Editor:

I feel it is important to respond to the July 17 letter from the Irondale River Protection Association about an application for a site plan amendment at the Bark Lake quarry. Some of the information published in that letter is not accurate and, out of respect for the community interest and involvement in this application, I would like to ensure any information related to this application is correct.

A company applying for an aggregate permit must supply the necessary background information to the Ministry of Natural Resources. It is standard practice for the proponent to hire a professional consultant to undertake comprehensive natural environment studies to show what impacts the proposal would have on the environment. Ministry technical specialists then perform an independent review of the information provided.

See MNR page 8

Highlands East is doing good job

To the Editor:

I have lived here for almost two years. In that time, we have had a change of people on our municipal council. Is there anything good to say about our new council here in Wilberforce and area? My answer is yes! I have been watching some improvements take place.

- A personal incident was addressed by Reeve Dave Burton (who actually took the time to come to my home and speak to me and get the right facts) and also by Bill Wingrove, the president of the community police association in this area.

- I have seen an effort made to have a doctor in place in Wilberforce at least 3 days a week

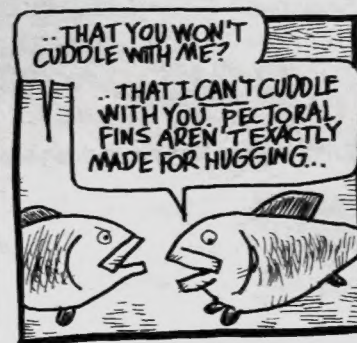

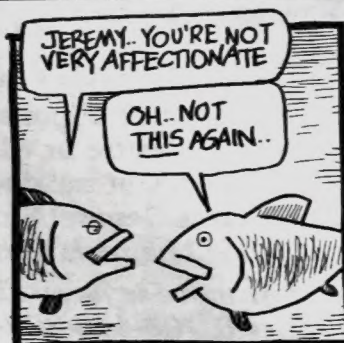

- An effort has been made to increase the coverage that we have by the OPP

- An effort has been made to fix the existing bridge on our road, and to replace the one that is closed for safety reasons

ed by the applicant to determine if the information is complete and acceptable and whether they agree with the conclusions reached. The 1999 Natural Environment Study and Impact Assessment is the study referred to in the letter.

This study determined that there was fish habitat on a number of waterbodies within the proposed quarry application area and recommended 30 metre reserves be placed around them to protect them from the effects of quarry operations. The Ministry agreed and these recommendations were followed.

A number of other environmental and technical studies have also been done, including:

- Stage 1 Archeological/Heritage Potential Assessment of the Proposed Royel Paving Ltd. Quarry (Nov 1999)
- Level 1 Hydrogeological Study (May 2002)
- Natural Environment Level 1/2 Technical Report Update and Social Impact Review (December 2003)
- Level 1 Hydrogeological Assessment (April 2004)
- Noise Impact Study of Quarrying and Crushing Operation (May 2004)
- Bark Lake Quarry Expansion Traffic Impact Study

(October 2006)

- Drainage Report for Bark Lake Quarry (January 2007)

The current proposal for an asphalt plant triggered the December 2003 Natural Environment Level 1/2 Technical Report and Social Impact Study referenced above. This was done by a different consultant from that of the 1999 study.

All of these reports and comments from the public including those from the adjacent landowners are part of the information the ministry must review before making a decision on whether to approve the current application. The Ministry of Natural Resources is committed to an open and transparent process in the review of this application. Anyone who wishes to view the proposal may call (705) 286-1521 and make an appointment to meet with Gary Clements, senior lands technician at the Ministry's Minden Area office at 12698 Hwy 35, Minden.

Council working hard

- There's been a huge push for recruitment of more volunteers for our fire departments

- We have had problems with bears this year. Our council is making the effort to try and control this situation for the safety of the people in this area. Not an easy task

I have asked myself, have we taken the time to really find out how many of the problems that are current were actually caused and in place before Dave Burton and company were elected?

Are we really aware of how many behind the scene hours a day it is taking to clean up and rectify these problems and that these things take time, but are being addressed?

All I have been reading in our local newspaper for the past nine months is negative comments. I felt it was time that some positive comments were made for the people that are doing a job that the rest of us can't be bothered to put our time or effort into, let alone the verbal and written abuse these people are subject to. Frankly, as a "newcomer" to this area, and a taxpayer, I am impressed.

Rotary Golf Classic scores a $40,000 donation for health services foundation

MATT JAMES

Staff Reporter

For the 10th consecutive year, the Rotary Club of Haliburton teed off and put on a golf classic in support of the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation.

A total of 164 participants took to the Delta Pinestone Resort golf course last Thursday and tournament chair Andy Salvatori was pleased to support the HHHSF with an estimated $40,000, says HHHSF executive director, Dale Walker. This money will go to the Foundation's $2.5 million Reach For The Future campaign.

Participants paid $200 for a round of golf with power cart, lunch, dinner, a Rotary golf T-shirt, an environmentally friendly goodie bag, lots of prizes, and of course, the pleasurable feeling of being part of yet another milestone event in Haliburton County.

The Golf Classic is one of the biggest fundraisers of the year and the day began at 8 a.m. with 20 golfers hitting the links early, on what began and ended as a beautiful day. But in mid-afternoon the remaining 144 golfers, who teed off at 1 p.m. in shotgun formation, weren't playing long before the clouds rolled in, rain fell and lightning flashed. But after the downpour the sun shone again and the game resumed.

On course was Honorary Chairman Scotty Morrison, past NHL referee-in-chief and 1999 Hockey Hall of Fame inductee. He retired to the area after hockey and has been a long-time supporter of the hospital.

Along with Morrison was friend and former employee, Ray Scapinello, whose name is also legendary in the NHL. Scapinello was one of the toughest NHL linesmen in history and he set untouchable records during a 33-year stint in the league. With 2,500 regular season games and 426 playoff games under his belt, he also worked 20 Stanley Cup finals. Since retiring from the NHL in 2004, Scapinello has written a book called Between The Lines, which consists of tales from four decades of the NHL.

Golfers, regardless of skill, did not go home empty-handed; there were prizes everywhere.

Low score winners from first to fifth place were Hugh Nichol, Mike Lennox, Chase Thurston, Eric Guttman, first, Andy, Sandra, Robin Glecoff, and Lee Paradise, second, Bob Park, Mike Ricci, Dave and Doug MacGowen, third, who received green fees for Heron Points Golf Links, Wildfire Golf Club, and Delta Pine Stone Resort, respectively. Fourth place went to Kevin Wyer, Harry Baker, Rick West, Chris Lund, who took home Nike Golf Shirts and Blue Jays tickets, and fifth place went to Jamie Cowen, Sheldon Stevenson, Roger and Curtis Bain who received cedar Adirondack chairs. The Golf Classic raffle was also stacked with great prizes.

Prizes for longest drive went to Jesse Johnson and Jennifer Rochefort, while closest to the pin went to Peter Ellins and Heather Cocksedge. Sandra Glecoff won closest to the line.

In a putting contest, Mac Gadway and Walt McKechnie both sank three putts winning them $100 in total. When asked by Walker how they would settle the matter, either split the money 50/50 or go to a playoff, the gentlemen simply told Walker that the money could go straight to the HHHSF.

And Molson rep Justin Moffat was only a couple of inches away from a hole-in-one, which would have earned him $10,000. Maybe next year.

Walker said the golf classic takes approximately 30 volunteers in order run smoothly and the event would not be possible without the kind support of the major and minor sponsors and of course, the golfers.

Duchene scores place on Ontario team's finalist list

MATT JAMES

Staff Reporter

He shoots, he scores—so far.

Haliburton's Matt Duchene made it through the first round of the men's provincial under-17 hockey team, competing against 84 other players.

If he makes the final cut, the 16-year-old will represent Ontario at the 2007/08 International World Hockey Challenge in London this Christmas.

Duchene will begin his rookie tenure with the Brampton Battalion at the OHL level this September. He will need to make the most out of his playing time because the final under-17 squad is decided on how players perform with their OHL or Jr. A clubs.

Duchene and 34 others will continue to be monitored by Team Ontario's director of operations, Rob Kitamura, head coach Jason Brooks, and assistant coaches Jake Grimes and Mario Cichillo.

Of his performance at the recent camp, held June 25-29 at York University, Duchene wasn't shy about his performance, regardless of the positive results.

"I didn't have a great camp to be honest but I got some great experience out of it," he said "So if I'm fortunate enough to get another tryout of this sort in the future, I can be better prepared."

Whether he's being modest or simply realistic, Duchene, through the eyes of those operating the team, still performed better than 50 other players in order to make the first cut, which is no easy task.

Duchene said that the camp's competition was extremely good, and though he may most be known for his offensive skill, he understands the importance of an over all game skill set.

"The competition forced me to play stronger and (be) more responsible away from the puck, which I think has helped further develop my overall game," said Duchene.

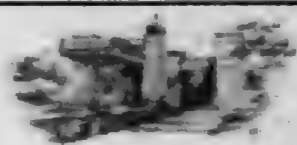

The atmosphere off the ice was relaxed and Duchene said that he and the players could joke around and have fun, but when the players hit the ice it was a different story.

"It was cool because you got to play alongside and got to know players that you may have had a personal rivalry against throughout your minor hockey career," said Duchene. "It didn't matter if he was your best friend or your worst enemy, you battled just as hard against everyone on the other teams."

MATT JAMES/ECHO

Ontario team tryout was a learning experience for Haliburton's Matt Duchene.

Coalition moves forward with new ideas to promote cycling in the Highlands

Call it wheels in motion for local cycling enthusiasts who want to put bicycles on the map in Haliburton County.

The Haliburton Highlands Cycling Coalition is doing just that with the release of a new map of cycling routes in Haliburton County, part of its overall effort to promote cycling in the area. The map, which is being sold locally for $3 each, offers directions and descriptions about local biking routes for residents and visitors to the area. The map is available throughout the area, including at the local Health Unit, County Information Centre in Minden, Undercover Books in Haliburton and Rail's End Gallery in Haliburton.

The coalition also has a web presence at www.cyclehaliburton.ca, which will feature more cycling events and information. The web site is live but is a work in progress as more information is posted on-line.

"Put it this way, we are pedalling hard – on the web and on the ground – to promote and advocate for cycling in the Highlands," says Sue Shikaze, a coalition member and health promoter with the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit.

The Health Unit and Health for Life are supporting the cycling coalition, which is primarily made up of volunteers with an interest in cycling. The coalition was formed in 2005, and has made considerable progress in a short time.

For the past two years, the coalition has organized the successful Shifting Gears: Haliburton's Celebration of Cycling. This year's week-long event in June drew an estimated 200 participants. In addition to the map and web site, Shikaze says the coalition is also developing a Cycling Master Plan for Haliburton County.

"We want to put on paper what the long-term vision is

The Haliburton Highlands Cycling Coalition has released a map of cycling routes in Haliburton County. The map is available throughout the area for $3 each.

for cycling in our community," she says. "This document is to be based on public feedback, and provides ways to develop a cycling network in Haliburton and improve routes for cyclists."

The cycling coalition has hired Marr Consulting Services to assist in developing the Cycling Master Plan. Public input sessions will be held later this year, with the plan to be completed by March 2008. The coalition has received funding for the Cycling Master Plan from the Communities in Action Fund and Haliburton County Development Corporation.

"We already have many trails and routes to suit cyclists of all ages and abilities," Shikaze notes. "We want to take the next step and continue improving the wheel appeal of this area."

For more information about the coalition or to obtain a copy of the cycling routes map, call (705) 457-1391 or e-mail info@cyclehaliburton.ca.

The OFTR (Ontario Federation of Trail Riders) has moved to Gooderham, and just this past weekend, with the help of Trails and Tours, 125 riders enjoyed the scenery that the Highlands has to offer as they rode 120kms from Gooderham to Crystal Lake for lunch and back. This was a charity event with the proceeds going to the Haliburton Highlands Trail Riders.

Gals and pals fish for a win

Judy and Terry Rulite have won the Gals and Pals Bass fishing tournament yet again with a whopping 18.75 lbs of total weight, and it's no surprise that many of their fish also won the biggest fish prize as well.

David Bailey who coordinates the yearly event says the turnout this year was the best to date with 33 teams entering the competition. The tournament started approximately 10 years ago by Gary Ballard, who wanted the tourney to be a fun fishing tournament for females. This year teams arrived from as far as Peterborough and Toronto and the two-person team must consist of at least one female.

Miskwabi cottagers asked to be mindful of water quality

LARRY HOLDEN

Special to the Echo

On Saturday, July 7 at the airport strip, the Miskwabi Area Cottager's Association (MACA) held its 33rd annual general meeting. There were 75 people in attendance.

The water report was presented by Haden Heathcock. His testing indicated that our lakes are in good shape with low phosphate levels and good water clarity. He stressed the need to keep septic systems in good order. Miskwabi is at the head of the watershed so property owners have only themselves to blame if water quality deteriorates.

Tim Hagarty and Deb Slingerland offered to help out with water testing on Lake Wenona while John Butt volunteered to help out on Long Lake. Volunteers are still needed for Lake Negaunee.

Haden reminded everyone that the health unit in Haliburton will test drinking water.

Sandra Bishop spoke about her attendance at a recent Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations workshop entitled "Docktalk." The seminar dealt with shoreline maintenance, septic care, invasive species and the implementation of a Lake Plan for the area. As soon as the association's website is up and running, there will be updates about lake stewardship. Sandra also reported on the Highlands Heritage Dream Quilt with all donations going toward Cottage Dreams Cancer Recovery Initiative.

Previous president Nancy Jackson talked about the Fleming College Art Auction at the Delta Pinestone on August 9 with all proceeds going to the students.

The president's report started off with the announcement that residents in the area will be expecting keys to their new mail boxes in the next three weeks. Meetings with Canada Post, the Haliburton Post Office, the local carriers, Dysart et al roads superintendent Brian Nicholson and Councillor Derek Knowles resulted in the new Community Boxes.

Trapper's Trail has now been resurfaced and only road maintenance will be conducted in the future. Letters have been written to council re the wind turbine bylaw; to the Miskwabi North Lake Cottager's Association inviting them to join the MACA; and to Hydro One for clarification on power outages and restorations in our area. Joining the Trent Severn Waterway coalition is also under consideration by the executive.

Items of interest included the excellent Enviro Book produced by the Haliburton County Development Corporation; the DVD entitled Invaders In Our Waters

(members were encouraged to borrow a copy from a director to view). The Hazardous Waste Days of August 11 and September 29 were noted.

The Cottage Watch program will be reviewed by the executive. October 10 is the date for the next provincial election and voters should be very aware of who the candidates are in the area. Tough environmental questions should be asked of them before votes are cast.

Members were also reminded of the corn roast on August 18 and the annual wine and cheese on September 15. Cautions were expressed about local bear sightings and of the need to be very careful on Miskwabi due to the lone loon chick that can be seen learning to swim and dive!

Councillor Derek Knowles spoke of the progress being made with waste management. Compactors will be installed at the Haliburton landfill site to compress cans and paper into smaller bundles. This will cut down on transportation costs to the recycling plant in Bracebridge. Taxes have risen by 10.6 per cent but Knowles said it was unavoidable due to rising costs in almost all other areas. The use of clear plastic garbage bags has been rescinded due to high costs.

Landowners responsible for 911 signage

Reeve Murray Fearrey reminded everyone that property owners are responsible for the 911 signage on their lots. Signs must be kept clear and upright. Caution was also expressed about the provincial election as there is currently a fiscal imbalance that needs to be rectified. Ontarians are paying $285 more per capita than any other province because of downloading of health and welfare costs. Reeve Fearrey advised voters to ask candidates what they intended to do regarding this imbalance.

Past president Paul Culver was thanked for his three-year term as president, as well as director and previous interim president Brett Kahler for his 14 years of service to the association.

Gerry Taylor was thanked for allowing the association to use his land for the meeting and Jim Sanford of Nu-Country Property Maintenance & Landscaping was also thanked for his free clean-up of the area.

Gillian and Nigel Hollings were manning the membership table.

The following directors were voted in to assume the next two-year term:

Larry Holden (President); Paul Culver (Past President); Sandra Bishop (Vice-President); Norm Fowler (Treasurer); Marg Montague (Secretary); Mike Giza, Andy Harjula, Haden Heathcock, Andy Mosher and Phil Wiseman.

In Norm Fowler's absence the treasurer's report was discussed, voted on and accepted. Andy Mosher and Susanne James of Century 21 were thanked for their generous donation of $600.

After the meeting members enjoyed a barbecued lunch of hot dogs and hamburgers thanks to chefs Tom and Kale Pendlebury.

Highlands East looks for community input

KEN MACPHERSON

Special to the Echo

Call it grass-roots democracy. Call it a whine-and-moan session. Call it what you will. The council of the Municipality of Highlands East is holding a series of community forums to ratepayers a chance to have their say as to how the council is doing their job.

They are asking, "What are we doing right? What issues are of the greatest importance in the community? In what areas would you like to see change?"

Council is allowing informal one-on-one discussions, and a more structured question and input period on those issues that are of interest and concern for the members of the community.

Session one for wards one and two takes place at the Cardiff Community Centre on Sat. July 28 at 10 a.m.. Ward three gets its shot at council on Sat. Aug. 18 at noon at the Gooderham Community Centre. Ward four meets with council on Sat. Aug. 18 at 3 p.m. at the Lloyd Watson Centre.

Coffee is on and the councillors look forward to your input.

Generators may not be CSA approved

From noon until 4:30 p.m. residents who think they may have one of the generators in question can bring them in to the fire hall for inspection.

Reeve Dave Burton says he cannot comment on how many generators have been turned in to date but noted that they have been "coming in pretty well daily." Burton says he has also received a number of telephone calls from concerned residents who purchased units from the Ward 2 fire hall.

Suspicion over the generators was first raised in late May when a member of the public approached Burton and expressed apprehension in regards to a generator purchased last summer. Following that initial tip, both Burton and Deputy Reeve Jim Mackie began investigating the matter and visited a number of residents to view the suspicious units first-hand.

Initially, three generators were uncovered, all of them being in the Launtop 6500-watt series, which is the same model that the fire hall had been selling. However, a fourth generator was also turned in by a commercial business in Wilberforce, and that generator was labelled "Alternative Power Source MG6500 CLE."

On June 1 Mackie contacted Daniel Langlois, manager of the CSA special investigations unit, in order to ascertain the validity of the markings on the "alternative power source" model. Langlois indicated that the CSA had no record of approving such a model.

On June 19, Mackie took two of the Launtop 6500 units, along with one generator from the Ward 4 fire hall and one from the Ward 1 fire hall, to be inspected by Langlois and CSA engineers. The following day, Mackie received a letter from Langlois indicating that all four of the generators were not listed in CSA records and, as a result, were not certified. Langlois also noted that the models had "several deficiencies" which rendered them ineligible to bear the registered CSA trademark.

To this point it remains uncertain exactly where the fire hall purchased the generators from. Mackie says that Langlois has requested proof of purchase records so that the CSA can trace the generators back to their producer, but to this point their investigation has not turned up much of anything.

To make things even more confusing, it seems that at least some of the generators sold through the Ward 2 fire hall actually were CSA approved, according to documents supplied at a council meeting last month by Station Commander Doug Bowen.

However, Bowen did note that the hall's records tracking the sale of generators are spotty, at best. Though it's estimated that more than 50 generators were sold last summer, Bowen says there are only nine receipts on file. Likewise, there were several different groups or individuals who were selling generators under the name of the "fire department."

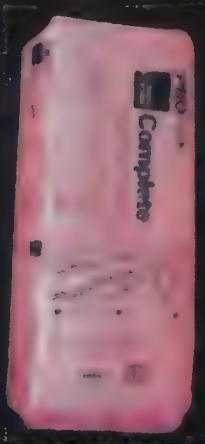

At this point in time, Burton says the municipality's main concern is not who is at fault, but rather how to keep affected ratepayers safe. "Right now it's public safety that we're concerned about. These things could electrocute somebody, they could burn somebody's house down, or they could gas somebody," he says.

Mackie says that "one of those 6500-watt generators produces more carbon monoxide than 200 idling cars."

Burton says he believes the fundraising effort was a good idea "in theory" but says it's extremely unfortunate that the generators were not properly CSA-approved. Likewise, because all of the units had CSA approval stickers, Burton says that most of the firefighters would have had no idea the units were faulty.

"You would trust that [the sticker] was right, but we're now finding out that it was not."

He says the municipality may eventually try to trace down the root of the problem, but in the immediate future they will continue to focus on getting the at-risk units away from people's homes. "The problem with these particular generators is probably province-wide, if not national. At least, that's what I've been hearing," he says. "But right now my main concern is here in Highlands East and the safety of our people."

How to save logging in Algonquin Park

South Algonquin brings townships and industry together for discussion

HEATHER KENDALL

Special to the Echo

Representatives from townships around Algonquin Park met with members of the logging industry last week to discuss the Ontario Parks Board report on "lightening the ecological footprint of logging" in the park.

Percy Bresnahan, mayor of the Township of South Algonquin, called the meeting because, he said, while the County of Renfrew was organized in responding to the report, other townships surrounding the park were not.

"I don't think the Ontario government has our interest at heart," he said. "We are the only ones that are going to protect our industry."

He added that two years ago the Ontario Parks Board wanted to stop logging altogether in the park, and wondered why David Ramsay, the Minister of Natural Resources, would appoint this same board to make recommendations. The board wants to drastically reduce how much of the park can be logged.

"He knew what answers he would get from this board when he appointed it," Bresnahan said.

Attending the meeting were representatives from Bancroft, Hastings Highlands, Head, Clara, Maria, Admaston/Bromley, Laurentian Valley, Town of Petawawa, Haliburton County, McNab-Braeside and Renfrew County, as well as councillors from South Algonquin. Three provincial members of parliament – John Yakabuski of Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke, Norm

John Yakabuski, provincial member of parliament for Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke, speaks to town officials and members of the logging industry as Haliburton-Victoria-Brock MPP Laurie Scott and Parry Sound-Muskoka MPP Norm Miller look on.

Miller of Parry Sound-Muskoka and Laurie Scott of Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock – were also at the table. In the audience were members of several logging and wood product businesses and Algonquin First Nations.

Bresnahan produced a survey just received from BioForest Technologies Inc. about forest management activities in the park. He said he spoke to the lead auditor and learned that the company has done two reports in the last 12 years and is currently conducting a third.

"The auditor says that logging practices have been exceptional in the park," said Bresnahan, who wondered why the ministry wasn't listening.

Yakabuski said that when something as vital as logging is to this area is in jeopardy "you can't just sit and wait. You must continue to pressure the ministry. If you sit back, and enough time passes, the government may slip it through."

Another of his concerns was that there wasn't full aboriginal involvement.

"Algonquin Park is part of the Algonquin land claims," he said. He added that the eventual management of resources in Algonquin Park would be jointly administered by the Algonquin First Nations and the Ontario government, and that any changes would have to be in consultation with the Algonquins. "It is my understanding that they were not part of the process," he said.

firmed that there was no consultation, and added, "The Algonquin First Nation is probably your biggest ally."

Miller said he understood that the report would affect the east side of the park more than the west, where his riding is. Still, he has industries that would be adversely affected by the report's implementation. He encouraged all municipalities to pass resolutions against the report.

Janice Visneskie, mayor of Killaloe, Hagarty and Richards and warden of the County of Renfrew, said that after meeting with Minister Ramsay in Pembroke late last month, she was "more hopeful" of the outcome. Renfrew County's position, she said, is that logging in Algonquin Park is (according to a document produced several years ago by the Ministry of Natural Resources) a $1 billion benefit to the county.

"One part of the [Ontario Parks Board] report that Renfrew County agrees with is that it was based on old data," she said. "We felt they should start updating that data."

She said that Ramsay told her that he is putting the report on hold until more information is received.

Members of the forest industry were asked for their opinions, and Robert McRae of McRae Mills was the first to respond. While he wasn't sure what the impact would be, he added "you know it won't be very positive." He referred back to the 1960s, when Leslie Frost was appointed by the government of the day to look at logging in the park. Frost's report led to the creation of the Algonquin Forest Authority. Frost's vision for Algonquin Park was very wise, McRae said. "He knew that all of these uses could co-exist in the park. Everyone has gotten along and worked together - it's unique."

He went on to say that a healthy-growing forest may be the best defence against a plague of insects or climate change. There are still wilderness zones, he added, but said that "by managing your forest, you get a healthy forest, and that's what you need. Our footprint has gone from very visible (a mill right in the park) to hardly visible in the last 30 years. You can travel through the park and see very little evidence of logging. The park has been logged for over 100 years and the forestry is first class - maybe the best in Canada. That's the message we should get out."

Jerry Murray of Murray Bros. Lumber suggested that the real answer lay in education.

"Politicians at every level need to get the message out to the general public as to what we're doing in the park: forestry in the park is a win-win situation." He added that, unless the logging is seen it's hard to understand, and suggested that on-site tours may be a possibility. Several others agreed that educating the public is important.

It was suggested that public meetings be held, and, with a provincial election looming in October, the issue should be brought up at candidates' debates. Another suggestion was to set up an educational program in the schools.

Norm Lemke of the County of Renfrew said that Ramsay has stated that he would not support anything that would have a negative impact on the economy and on jobs.

"We should go back to the minister with his own words," he said. He also said that the wrong people were at the table when the board report was written, and that the minister should start over with the proper stakeholders. Bresnahan added that the industries, tourism and municipalities all around the park should be represented on the board.

Chief Doreen Davis of the Sharbot Lake Algonquin First Nation is currently protesting a uranium mining company testing in the Sharbot Lake area, but still offered support to the Algonquin Park fight.

"One minute the government is talking about the environment, and the next they're helping take uranium from our land," she said. With the support of neighbours and businesses in the Sharbot Lake area, she says the company will be stopped, "and I'm here to help do the same for you in Algonquin Park. The Algonquins are the keepers of this land. I know you are keeping a healthy forest there. We can do it with the strength of the Algonquins; reach out your hands to us."

The groundswell to save logging in the park is increasing.

A hundred pounds of clay

Harcourt Park families roll up their sleeves to support literacy in Wilberforce

TRUDY POGUE

Special to the Echo

The morning began with Harcourt Park's own Tony Bennett on guitar, Jean Keith on piano and Pat Arber on vocals. They are "The Harcourt Park Trio" and they performed their own rendition of "A Hundred Pounds of Clay." The song was originally recorded by Gene McDaniels and reached #3 on the charts in 1961. The modified lyrics were a fitting introduction to the "Tiles for Literacy" event at the Harcourt Park Community Centre on July 14.

Harcourt Park resident and potter, Charlene McConnell, used a little more than a hundred pounds of the gray stuff (about 120 lbs) to make 102 6"x6" clay tiles. For $10, participants decorated and personalized their tiles and will be able to keep them to use as wall hangings or trivets, or to give away as gifts. The tiles and all materials were generously donated by Charlene and her husband, Rob, so that 100 per cent of the proceeds will go directly to literacy programs at Wilberforce Elementary School.

When all the tiles had been painted, etched and stamped, over $1,000 had been raised. But Charlene's work is not over; each tile now has to be bisque-fired to seal the colour, glazed and then fired again.

TRUDY POGUE/Special to the Echo

Patti-Anne Verboon helps daughter Jaclyn, 3, etch her name on the back of her tile.

With 24 hours per firing, Charlene will be fitting the tiles in between her other work in the kiln - work she will be showing at the upcoming Haliburton Art & Craft Show on July 27-29 in Head Lake Park. She also sells her fun and functional pots for home and garden at the new Cushion Cottage Gallery in Wilberforce.

After the musical performance, Charlene gave instructions while the eager artists waited patiently (and some impatiently) to get their hands on the clay, "slip" (i.e. clay paint) and materials. Charlene lifted up a small sponge which, to a potter, is a "smoother outer" and an eraser. She talked about "scraffito" (putting a colorant on the clay and carving through it to the underlying colour) and "insizing" (filling deep grooves with slip and smoothing it out with a potter's rib or credit card). And then they went to work...

Brent and Brooke Zubal, from Ohio, are enjoying their annual summer vacation at their grandparents' cottage. Brooke painted the sun and a fish on her tile while her brother used a maple leaf to create the perfect Canadian souvenir.

"When it's cooked, I'm gonna hang it up in my room at the cottage," says Olivia Crowdy, 6, who divided her tile into four sections with a butterfly design.

Cassandra Rose inscribed and decorated her cottage address on her tile: "219 Little Straggle". Mom Cora Rose says they'll hang it outside the cottage as a sign.

Michael Arber, 10, painted on his tile, "a fisherman, a trout biting a lure, clouds and rain and the sun trying to peak through the clouds." It will be a tangible reminder of a great cottage memory: "My papa and I were fishing and it rained on us," he says.

Some tiles included personal messages, like "Happy 50th Birthday" and "Daddy's Girl". There were hand-painted pictures, butterfly and frog imprints, cottage images and leaf prints - lots of outdoor themes, naturally!

Three women sat together at the end of one table, enjoying the opportunity to be creative and chat.

"I figured since my kids wouldn't come, I'd do it instead," says Joan Bennett (wife of Tony). "This has been fun. It's very therapeutic."

Cottage friends Heather Eatson and Roxanne Tidmarsh agreed. Joan plans to keep her tile at the cottage and Roxanne's will be going into her garden.

Valerie Smith, Trillium Lakelands District School Board trustee, was also on hand and purchased her own tile. "I couldn't resist," she says. Her tile will be a reminder of what this event is doing for

Learn to swim at Wilbermere Lake in August

community news

wilberforce

Hilda Clark

448-2018

Swimmers are enjoying the first two-week session of lessons at Wilbermere Lake beach. The second session will be August 13 to 24. Call the Highlands East offices for information.

Condolences are extended to the Reverend Peter and Joan Robertson of the Wilberforce and Gooderham United Churches. Peter's mother died in Dundas, Ontario on Thursday July 12, 2007. She was in her 96th year. A memorial service will be held in August.

Matthew Barras of Lindsay was the lucky winner of the attractive burgundy-coloured quilt and cushions raffled by the Wilberforce Heritage Guild. The draw took place at an afternoon tea at the Outpost Historic House on Saturday, July 21. Many thanks to all who purchased ticket to support the Guild's operation of the museum. Your help and that of tickets sellers and those who made the quilt and cushions are greatly appreciated.

The Loop Troupe is set to present Mother Variations, a two-act comedy this Friday and Saturday, July 27 and 28 on the Lloyd Watson Centre stage. Show starts at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $8 at the door or get them in advance at Agnew's Store. Enjoy the struggles of three generations of women not only as mothers but in their ventures into the arts in writing, acting and painting. And all in a one bedroom apartment.

Softball and T-ball games, great fun for local youngsters, ended a few weeks ago. Now they are signed up and ready to go with soccer. Thanks so much to the organizers of these activities, which are so important for the children.

Sharon Lawrence was the guest speaker at the Haliburton Highlands Writers' And Editors' Network annual meeting earlier this month. After breakfast and a brief meeting at the Delta Pinestone Inn on July 7 Sharon kept her audience enthralled as she spoke of the life and work of her late husband R.D. Lawrence. Ron was internationally acclaimed as a naturalist, biologist, and author of more than thirty books. He and Sharon are well known for their work with wolves and the care and rehabilitation of a variety of wild creatures.

Liaisons, The R.D. Lawrence Commemorative Anthology (2007), launched at this meeting was published in Ron's honour. The anthology includes works chosen from hundreds of submissions from across North America and the UK in tribute to the themes and philosophies expounded by R.D. Lawrence, as well as short selections from his works.

The R.D. Lawrence Place, a sustainable building being constructed on the Minden Hills Museum grounds, will be home to the R.D. Lawrence collection. How fitting that this world-famous person who spent many productive and happy years here in Haliburton County is being so honoured. The R.D. Lawrence Place will be an interactive learning centre, a writers' centre and a gathering place reflecting the work and philosophy of R.D. Lawrence. It will open later this year.

LAURA HENDIRCK/ECHO

Anglers and bass battle at fishing tournament

community news

harcourt

Valerie Smith
448-3640

Do small mouth bass put up a far greater fight than large mouth bass? Do big fish bite only big lures? Do light bottom boots spook fish? Is fishing pure luck?

On Saturday I asked some of these questions to some of the participants in Harcourt's 10th Annual Bass Tournament to get their take on the art of bass fishing. With the combined wisdom of many of the fisher persons in attendance, I discovered that you need to be quiet while fishing, need heavier rods, shorter, stronger leaders, some split shot, floating line and big lures or was it smaller tackle and thinner lines? It was also confirmed that fishing is not pure luck but rather requires good reflex reaction and special technical approaches to find the fish.

I heard so many strategies and stories that I am more confused than ever. However, there was one thing that all the fishermen did agree on. There is nothing like the thrill when the bass strikes, breaks the calm waters in an explosion of water droplets and the battle begins between fish and man. Many of these big guys do manage to outmaneuver the tactics of the fisherman, however. Many were brought in alive in this year's live-release tournament. With 94 teams competing, the three lakes of Benoit, Elephant and Baptiste produced over 419.16 pounds of small and large mouth bass.

The 69-year-old Elephant Lake Lodge has seen many such tournaments take place on its shores and we thank hosts Bill and Sandy Smith and Cindy Baumhour for offering their picturesque establishment for this annual tournament.

Each two-man team was allowed to weigh in only five fish, all of which had to be alive. Bragging rights for the prestigious first prize was awarded to Gary Miller and Guy Potter with a total of 16.15 pounds of bass fish. Just an excellent day for them!

Second prize, 16.12 pounds: Brad Arnott and Jay Martin. Third place, 15.12 pounds: Jay Irwin and Jason Hughes. Fourth place, 14.15 pounds: Scott Meldrum and Ronnie Potter.

Fifth place, 14.04 pounds: Brian Cunningham and Steve Miller.

Sixth place, 13.66 pounds: Brian Wilson and Burry Caib. Seventh place, 13.132 pounds: G. J. Luloff and partner Nicole.

Eighth, with 13.13 pounds was awarded to Grant and Kody Musselman.

Ninth place, 12.48 pounds: Chad Jorkoski and Evan Hargreaves.

Tenth place, 12.14 pounds: Wally and Stephen Segulic.

Peter Healy and daughter Lindsay Healy won the parent/child category with their 10.86 pounds of bass. All children in the parent/child category were the recipients of fishing rods donated by one of the tournament's many sponsors. Congratulations to Connor Rowe, Blair Forrest, Lindsay Healy, Daniel Durkee and Alex Danilko.

Brothers Ryan and Sean Baumhour were the winning team who caught a beautiful 5.66 pound bass winning them $500 for the coveted "Big Bass" category. Sean brought the fish in; however, Ryan was instrumental in manning the boat while Sean landed the "big guy". Ryan and Sean are the grandsons of Bill and Sandy Smith and sons of equally proud parents Cindy and James Baumhour. So congratulations are extended to both boys on an excellent catch.

Further to the top ten teams receiving cash prizes, there were numerous prizes drawn. We wish to extend a big note of thanks to the following sponsors who donated the many prizes: Wilberforce Legion, Agnew's

General Store, Bancroft Canadian Tire, Home Hardware, Martinwood Golf Club, Cedar Meadow Golf, Rivers Edge Golf Club, Bancroft Golf Club, Bancroft Motors, Bancroft Marine, Vance Motors, Price Ford, Molson Brewery, Joan and Chris Grant Realtor, Elephant Lake Lodge and Foodland of Wilberforce.

A special note of thanks to tournament event organizer Ed Otto and all the volunteers who assisted Ed in making the tournament such an outstanding success.

Participants had lovely fishing weather under bright blue skies and took home a catch full of great memories that will last until the next bass tournament.

As a special note of interest, this event was a catch and release tournament and all fish were weighed and immediately returned to the water.

Something to think about: 20 years from now you will be more disappointed by the things you did not do than by the ones you did do. So throw off the bowlines-sail away from your safe harbour, catch the wind in your sails, explore, dream and discover. May everyone continue to enjoy a very safe and happy summer holiday.

Meals on Wheels: Getting food to people who need it

Over the next six months, thanks to monthly donations from the Minden Food Bank and 4Cs Lilly Anne, seniors who can't afford all the meals they need will get a break. The idea for the donations came after the need for a subsidy for people using the Meals on Wheels program was brought up at a Food Net meeting.

Food Net is a collective of food services in the area who work together to find solutions to problems like this one. Food Net meets once every three months. At meetings, organizations identify areas where there is a need for more money and agencies that have the ability to raise funds help to fill those gaps.

"We wouldn't have been able to do this without Food Net: this committee helps fill gaps of need that wouldn't happen otherwise"

The cost of a meal for seniors is $4.00 for each frozen entrée, $1.25 for a soup and $1.25 for dessert. The cost limits some clients with small incomes from being able to afford the amount of entrees they need.

Starting last week a form was sent to clients of Meals on Wheels to determine if they were eligible for a subsidy.

Shultz says she hopes they will be able to meet all the requests for help without having to rank people according to need.

In a statement regarding the donation, Donna MacDonald, the Executive Director of Community Care says they are "so pleased" the two organizations have chosen to partner with them.

"We know that without proper nutrition people become ill and end up in the more expensive hospitals and prematurely in long-term care facilities," her statement went on to say. "These meals will help prevent that from happening and give a better quality of life to the recipients."

Clients range from short-term service users like diabetic patients working to bring down their blood sugar levels to those who have physical limitations that render them incapable of grocery shopping and cooking for themselves.

The program is a necessary one in the community. The lone volunteer who delivers the meals every Thursday logged 383 clicks on her car last week alone.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

SINGLE-PERSON HOME BUYERS

QUESTION: What is the outlook for single-person homebuyers?

ANSWER: We are seeing a growing trend in single-person home buyers coming into our office. Singles, single senior citizens and single parents are joining the traditional family buyers, mainly because singles are an increasing segment of our society.

Many single buyers are joining forces in two's and three's to become homeowners. Usually, the bottom line here is the financial consideration.

For those who prefer to go it alone, there is a good selection of condos and smaller multiple dwellings. For those with realistic housing expectations, there are excellent options worth pursuing.

THERE ARE MANY opportunities available for single persons desiring to become homeowners.

Exhibit explores post-industrial landscape

Rails End Gallery & Arts Centre presents
E.G. Blundell: bloom
New paintings on gouged wood
 The Highland Room
 August 4 - October 13
 Opening Reception, Sat. July 4, 2-4 pm, Artist Talk, 3 pm
 "Cobalt Blooms Dramatic"

"My work is a life-long struggle to connect to the world through painting. Painting is a force, a way toward the infinite. I see a through-line from the edges of the universe, to the surface of the Earth, to the cells that we are made of. Natural structures are built and demolished causing endless patterning. Humans build and destroy creating the pattern of civilization. My paintings begin with and are about my relationship with these patterns."

- EG Blundell, Artist Statement, July 2007

The Rails End Gallery is pleased to present bloom: new paintings on gouged wood by Gooderham-based Gary Blundell.

As an artist, Blundell, can be conveniently located within the most visible of Canadian artistic practices: he is a landscape painter. But Blundell's work is a far cry from traditional landscape painting. Upon viewing the work in bloom, you will quickly find that Blundell's interpretation of landscape and his view of it is firmly rooted in contemporary experience.

There is no question that in modern times, much of our Canadian landscape has been altered by human, industrial activity. Over the years Blundell has turned his attention to the new artificial landscapes created through human industry, such as road cuts, quarries and other landscapes created as a result of extraction based industry. Developed specifically for the Rails End, the work in bloom is the result of Blundell's investigations into the post-industrial landscape, patterns and colours left behind by the silver mining industry in Cobalt, Ontario. "Bloom" is a geological term that refers to the pink rust stains left on the rock's surface by cobalt and silver deposits. Upon Blundell's first excursion to Cobalt, he was first met with a massive, exposed rock face and the cobalt blooms on its exposed surface. Most of the paintings in this exhibition are informed by this particular rock face. They reference the interesting visual juxtaposition of the staining patterns only visible as a result of human scouring, and the gradual reclamation of the exposed rock surfaces by the trees - nature. The result is a tension in the work that is striking and dramatic.

Being a geologist by trade, Blundell looks at the land like a scientist and re-creates his experience of it from the heart and soul. His works are born of highly developed observations of the land, morphing into bold interpretations of the abstract patterns he has observed in the geological formations of our planet. Avoiding sentimentality, Blundell creates work that is at once beautiful, violent and eroded, mimicking the earth's natural forces of change and transformation. Most intriguing is how Blundell's creative process mirrors the land's - he uses a router on wood and repetitively applies and removes his medium, emulating the earth's and technology's erosive forces as he creates his paintings. Choice of materials and use of tools are integral to Blundell's work. As curator, David Aurndt stated in reference to Blundell's work, he uses the router "like a drawing tool." For Blundell, the router is as important to his process as the brush and the paint. It viscerally connects him to his subject matter.

The double meaning of the word 'bloom' is fitting for the exhibit's title and for Blundell's approach to his work: There is beauty and naturally dramatic abstraction in these manufactured landscapes, despite the high impact industries that created them. In Blundell's words, "sometimes it is the damage done - human or natural - that is beautiful."

Gallery hours: Wednesday - Saturday 10 am - 5 pm

SUMMER 2007

Swimsuit and Bikini Season... It's Cool!

ULTRA FEMININE BATHING SUITS

Whether they are stylish or cute, this season's bathing suits share an ultra feminine quality. Trendy motifs, sexy cuts, warm tones, and charming cover-ups are the must-haves for the summer of 2006.

Once again, two-piece bathing suits rule the runways and the beaches. Mini-short and bikini bottoms are matched to bandeau, halter, or triangular tops. Many suits are adorned with stylish details (buckles, rings, belts), while others focus primarily on exotic or abstract prints.

Although strapless tops are very popular, women with larger chests should instead choose a halter top that offers good support, or a tankini top that resembles a camisole and offers more coverage. There are multiple variations of the bikini. The skirtini bottom is more and more prized for its matching miniskirt, while we are also seeing more cut-out suits, a kind of seductive fusion between the one-piece and two-piece bathing suits.

EH! holds its general meeting

Eleanor Cooper

754-2398

Environment Haliburton, otherwise known as EH!, met for their annual general meeting on July 21 at Maple Lake United Church. Pot luck was followed by the board meeting. New president, Eric Lilius, was elected as well as the vice-president, Heather Ross. Seven of the 20 in attendance were Highlands Community Action people.

Congratulations to Lottie Ruttan on her 86th birthday, July 14. Much of Lottie's life revolves around family activities, the most recent of which is the prospective wedding of her grandson Joel Edwards, son of Arlene and Eric Edwards. Sara Corbey and Joel will be married on August 11th on Sara's family's property on Tulip Road. A Jack and Jill shower took place on Essonville Road on July 8. Great-granddaughter, Rylie, at four years of age will be the youngest of the bridal party, to everyone's delight.

One of the cards with the floral greeting on Lottie's birthday hailed her as a great lady and an inspiration. The community of her many friends heartily echo this sentiment.

Dusk Dances gave several Guilford dancers experience in imagination in the dance they performed at Head Lake Park from July 19-22. Carlin Dixon, Lauren Dixon, Emma Paul, and Bethany Snelgrove did justice, under Julie Barban's direction, to "Beneath the Willow". Their size, their costumes and agility in sudden appearance from the roots of the willows gave the magical touch that enchanted the audience. We look forward already to next year's performances. Jordyn Archer just gets better with every performance whenever and wherever that happens.

Special thanks to Adrian Martin, summer program co-ordinator.

Transportation project approved

Surveys, focus groups and interviews have identified a lack of access to affordable transportation required to attend necessary services and obtain assistance. This is often a determining factor when deciding to leave an abusive situation.

The Kawartha Lakes and Haliburton Domestic Violence Co-ordinating Committee (KLHDVCC) is made up of agencies from the justice, health and social service sectors that provide services to victims of domestic violence, sexual assault and elder abuse in the City of Kawartha Lakes and Haliburton.

The committee has been successful in its grant application to the Ministry of the Attorney General's Ontario Victim Services Secretariat to create a Rural Victims Transportation Network. This is a pilot project, led by Community Care City of Kawartha Lakes, that will run until April 2008 and there is hope it will receive funding to keep the service going permanently.

The Rural Victims Transportation Network is now available to the public. This service is free of charge. The transportation is provided by volunteers who have received 19 hours of specialized training. This transportation service is free for members of our community who can not afford or who do not have access to transportation and have experienced elder abuse, sexual assault and/or domestic violence and need to get to medical, counselling, legal appointments or are searching for permanent housing.

If you would like to arrange a ride or find out more about this service contact the agency you would like to see or check the new KLHDVCC website at www.klhdvc.ca or contact Liza Hancock, the Rural Victims Transportation Network Coordinator at 705-328-4843 or lhancock@community-care.on.ca.
